No. 11.

But to the consideration of talent. If public speaking be the criterion, by which we are to judge of the talents of statesmen, and it is the only one by which we can judge favorably of the new ministry, then was Mr. Pitt the greatest statesman (which the coalition deny) if not, what are the claims of the new ministers to ability? In office, lords Grenville, Spencer, Sidmouth, Mr. Windham, &c. were stigmatised as incapable, by the Foxites; while the Foxites, on the other hand, were equally condemned by their opponents. Is it for the abilities displayed by lords Grenville, Spencer, Sidmouth and Windham, when in office, that the Foxites have called for their return? Or is it because the Foxites are continued in power, that the Grenvilles represent them as excellent statesmen? If ministers are to be chosen for their power of public speaking, and we see no other reason for choosing the present ministry, then, we ask, why, upon the principle of including all the rank and talent, are lords Hawkesbury and Castlereagh, with Mr. Canning and others, excluded from the new ministry? These gentlemen are very able public speakers, and possess great abilities as statesmen. Both lords Eldon and Mulgrave are superior in talents to lords Fitzwilliam and Spencer; but the marquis of Wellesley is a far more able orator than any man in the cabinet, Mr. Fox excepted; and as a statesman, he is superior to Mr. Fox himself. Why is the marquis of Wellesley omitted, if it be not that the principle on which the ministry is formed is not that of comprehending all rank, talents and consideration, but of rewarding all servile followers? Has the coalition neutralised the marquis by half threats of impeachment and half promises of protection? The coalition indeed will not allow that any one of their own circle possess either virtue or talents. Lords Grenville, Sidmouth, Mr. Windham, &c. were long stigmatised by Mr. Fox's party as corrupt and incapable. Now they have joined their standard, they are all purity and talent. This language of party, is not that of the public. Lords Hawkesbury, Castlereagh and Mr. Canning, are as able speakers as lords Spencer, Fitzwilliam, Sidmouth, Ellenborough, Moira, H. Petty, Mr. Grey or Mr. Erskine, and they are quite as able statesmen too. Why are this excluded from this broad-bottomed administration, which was to comprehend the men of rank, talent and influence of all parties. It cannot be for want of ability either in the closet or in parliament, since we see that men much inferior to them are included in the cabinet. If they are excluded for want of ability in the closet, why is lord Barham dismissed,

This principle of securing unanimity and vigor by including in the ministry all the rank, talent, and influence of the country, is urged with a very ill grace by the old opposition. By this principle it is avowed that party distracts and weakens a government, that it is mischievous to the state. What else can be the meaning (setting the selfish jobbing objects out of the question) of securing unanimity and vigor by including the heads of all parties in the ministry? Is not this an avowal that the system of opposition so long carried on by Mr. Fox and his friends, has been injurious to the country? Mr. Fox would <sup>not</sup> ~~not~~ <sup>aspire</sup> ~~aspire~~ <sup>to secure his own elevation</sup>, but when raised, he would kick down the ladder by which he ascended. He would suffer no party out of power, if he were in place; no opposition should exist if he were minister. He seems to think himself possessed of a patent for party and opposition, and that the monopoly belongs exclusively to himself. Out of place he represents party as essential to the constitution, and boasts of it; but the moment his party acquires such strength as promises a triumph he considers all other party as improper. The sum of all this is, that Mr. Fox feels towards party in no other way than as it tends to gratify his personal ambition. After having torn and distracted the country by parties, after having reduced it to a helpless state; then he proposes a union of all parties for the good of the nation! if this union were founded on principle, we should admire it; but it is founded on the sacrifice of all principle, except that ruling one, personal ambition. Which of the present ministers is it that has renounced his former opinions? Are Lords Grenville, Spencer, and Mr. Windham, now they are ministers, ready, with Mr. Fox, to accept the treaty of Amiens? Is Lord Sidmouth ready to surrender Malta? Or is Mr. Fox ready to prosecute the war on Mr. Windham's ideas, that a state of hostility with France is more safe and advantageous than a state of what is called peace? If these are now the sentiments of any of these gentlemen, merely because they are ministers, they are the greatest culprits in existence. For, if this be the case, they are ready to spread war and desolation throughout the world, that they may attain the objects of their ambition; places of trust and emolument in government.

While we are anxious to see the country derive the advantages it must derive from the absence of party, from the exertions of a strong and unopposed government, we must not shut our eyes and conclude that the present ministry will form such a government, merely because they so give it out. The scene of contest will only be removed, we fear, from parliament to the cabinet. It will be removed from the public eye, but the public will not the less feel its effects. However, we shall "hope for the best." Mr. Fox during his whole

These general observations on the principles on which the new administration is professedly founded, will be strikingly supported by an investigation of the individual appointments, into which we shall enter to-morrow or next day.

FROM THE POST BOY.

DESCRIPTION OF TRIPOLI.

*Extracted from a letter from Dr. CowDE RY, to his friend at Dartmouth College (N. H.) dated Tripoli Casile, May 20th.

“THE city or town of Tripoli stands on the north coast of Africa, north lat. 32 54, and long. E. from London 13 11—it stands upon the ruins of ancient Pea and a sandy desert; it contains about 40,000 Mahometans, 5,000 Jews, and 1000 Papists and Greeks; only a few of the most trusty Mahometans are allowed to bear arms. It contains eight mosques and one christian church; some of the mosques are ~~very~~ <sup>very</sup> ~~large~~ <sup>large</sup> being what they call an infidel or an unbeliever in the Mahometan religion, was never permitted to step in one of them, but was allowed to stand at the door and look in; I never discovered any elegance about them, the floors are covered with mats, and the Mahometans take their shoes off at the door before they go in to worship upon what they call the holy ground. Tripoli contains several baths some of which are very commodious, and are places of considerable resort, though the dictates of Mahomet, which directs the keeping the body clean. I have seen many deviate from this, and instead of washing do rub their bodies with dry sand; this custom I am informed originated among pilgrims and other travellers who were not able to find water while travelling over the desert. The Bedowen Arabs often practice this imperfect method of purification even where water is at hand. Many of the buildings have the appearance of great antiquity of which the inhabitants can give no account; among them is a Roman palace and a Triumphal Arch with Roman inscriptions, they are of the finest marble.

“ The Castle stands on the water’s edge at the northeasternmost part of the town, its ramparts are of different heights ; on the land side they are from forty to eighty, and on the water side they are from thirty-five to forty feet in height : twenty-five pieces of brass ordnance of different sizes are mounted on different parts of the Castle to command the town, adjoining country and harbor. Several of the apartments in the west end of the castle are large, commodious and airy, and ornamented with a variety of fine marble, Mosaic and stucco work, and furnished with large looking glasses, carpets and gold embroidery, upon red damask &c. Here the bashaw receives foreign ministers, &c. — Here he holds his divan, which he often imperiously overrules, and his mandates are often crowned with the most cruel torture and death ; it was here that we were arraigned before the bashaw on the first night of our captivity ; here are also a great number of small apartments, a large open court and a spacious gallery for the accommodation and residence of the bashaw’s wives, children and attendants ; here is also, a bomb proof room to which the bashaw often fled on suspicion of danger. The east end of the castle is converted into stables for the bashaw's and Mameluke's horses and prisoners, where our officers were confined and where I was confined until the bashaw took me into his household, and where the bashaw confines his hostages and malefactors; and in the midst of these gloomy regions is the magazine of gun powder. These mansions of horror are in bad repair, full of vermin, and the filthiest place in all Tripoli. The town (including the castle is about three and an half miles in circumference. The country about Tripoli to the foot of Mount Atlas, which is two days journey from Tripoli is principally a sandy and barren desert. The town and the ramparts and batteries, which enclose it, are built of ruins of ancient Fea, Lepsis, and Sabrata, which are marble and a variety of other calcareous stone among which are shafis of grait, many of which are very large; the cement is lime and sand; regularity of architecture is not to be seen in the modern buildings. The town and batteries are generally white, washed with lime at the commencement of Ramadan. The tops of the houses are flat and covered with a composition chiefly of lime which when dry forms a very firm terrace.

“ To prevent the effects of fire from their enemies the whole town is in a state of fire proof. The fresh water used in Tripoli (except in time of scarcity when it is brought from the wells in the desert, on mules, asses, and by Christian slaves) is rain water caught in winter, the only time of rain in this country : it runs from the terraces through earthen tubes into large vaulted reservoirs which are built of stone and lime, and coated with lime, and are in the earth below the influence of the sun, where it is preserved from filth, and when drawn for use it is remarkably clear, cool and pleasant. The wells in and about Tripoli, for about two miles from the sea shore, produce brackish water, which is used for cleaning their stone floors, sinks, necessaries, &c. and for watering gardens during the dry season. Sinks lead from the houses through the bottoms of the necessaries, into very large sewers which lead into the sea; all of which are built of stone and lime. The streets not being paved are naturally very dirty, but every thing of the nature of manure is diligently gathered into large baskets, flung upon camels, mules and asses, and carried into the gardens to raise the soil from its natural state of barrenness. These little plantations are each enclosed with high walls; they contain from two to six acres each; many of them are cultivated in the European style by European gardeners and are made to produce many of the useful roots, plants, and fruits that are natural to the torrid and temperate zones. These inclosures are about 2000 in number all interspersed with tall date-trees, and are laid out in such a manner that collectively they form a semicircle which extends from shore to shore at a little distance from the town, forming a large circular avenue of sand between the town and gardens. This evergreen half zone, the sandy desert on which it is planted, and Mount Atlas, which borders the prospect, when viewed from the top of the castle or gate of the town, presents a beautiful prospect.

"The winds from the north, N. E. and N. W. are generally very salubrious—those from the south and S. E. come over the parched continent and are generally very oppressive, they are called the Syrocco—they sometimes rise to that degree of heat and violence that people who are not able to find shelter often perish. They sometimes last three days, but generally not longer than the first 12 of the 24 hours. The nights are sometimes cool after rain; but I never saw any frost during the two winters I was in Tripoli.

The principal market is held every Tuesday on the avenue between the town and gardens where a variety of articles are sold; here the butchers kill and sell their meat chiefly to Christians, Jews, and the Tripoline nobility. The common class of people eat but little meat, their principal diet is dates, olives, oil of olives, bread and a variety of vegetables, which they cook with oil, &c. The most prevailing disorders I discovered among them were aphthulmia in summer and catarrh and slight pneumonic affections in winter, the former I attribute to a remarkable serene brilliant sky and the scorching winds from the continent, and the latter to the want of proper clothing. The dead, all except the bashaw's family, and the Mufti, or high priest, are buried out of the town.

"The earth in and about Tripoli, is a mixture of several kinds, the most predominant is of a calcarious silicious nature—this forms what travellers have called an of sand. There is a quay of li about four miles from the town, i w the level of the desert and is m ed by Christian and Negro slaves.

HORRID MURDER

Extract of a letter from a gentleman Hawkins to his friend in this town ed

" April 19, 18

DEAR SIR,

“ THERE was on Monday night, 8th instant, one of the most heinous murders committed in the upper part of this county, ever heard of. Mary Doherty, was murdered by her daughter, about 13 or 14 years of age, with 3 blows, with an axe; the old man was asleep in one of his little children in his arms, the first stroke was in his temple, he fell down, and the girl gave two more in his forehead, which put an end to his existence. The girl, her brother 10 or 11 years old, her sister 8 or 9 years old, rolled the body down, to carry him off; the oldest girl, at the end, her brother and little sister together, but the little girl was unable to carry her part, and her sister (the murderer) whipped her severely to make her carry it, but could not. She then opened the door (a potatoe hole) and rolled him in, and lay until Saturday, when he was found by the three children and two small boys, who slept there every night. When the girl was apprehended, she said she had killed her father, and had done so because her father had killed her mother. Since being committed, she says she did not kill her father, but that it was her brother, and says she was scared, and confessed she had killed him to save her own life, she was afraid the men who took her would hang her; the brother and sister saw the body, and flung him in the garden, where he was found; the girl intended on Saturday night to have cut him in pieces, so as to enable her to carry him off, but the old man drank very hard, and when he was very cross in his family; that she intended to tell him of killing her mother, and frequently whipped his daughter; on Sunday before the murder was committed, she got an axe to kill her father, but it under the bed, where she lay, but it appears she was determined to kill the murder on Sunday night, but she did not until Tuesday night; then did she intend to have cut him in pieces, to have no more of him. This (in a girl of her age) is a very bad thing.”

Alexandria Daily Advertiser.
WEDNESDAY, May 28.
Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Washington to his friend in Alexandria.
"I am happy to inform you that on the application of William Mayne Duncanson the corporation of Washington city have passed a law to establish a ferry over Potomac river, to Alexander's island, at the place intended for the BRIDGE. A direct road to this ferry would greatly facilitate & shorten the communication between the two cities."
Information, which is known to proceed from an unquestionable authority, was on Friday last received at New York, stating that Miranda, with a considerable force had landed at Barcelona; and that the British fleets of war Lally and Jafon, had proceeded to join him. This intelligence is contained in a letter from Trinidad, dated May 16, addressed to a gentleman in New York, who is highly interested in the issue of this expedition.
We perceive in one of our London papers, the following article under the Madrid head of March 6.
"The American minister Mr. Erving, left this place last week unexpectedly for London; he did not take leave of the diplomatic body—political reasons were at first assigned for this circumstance, but it was afterwards said, that the death of his father was the cause of his departure."
In one of the London papers, we perceive the following article under the Hamburg head of March 28.
"All the accounts received here from Switzerland represent that country as laboring under the utmost distress, from the prohibition of exporting its manufactures into France and Italy, and from its usual supplies of provisions from Swabia having been cut off, at the instigation of the French government. The communication between Talleyrand and the Prussianman are stated to have lately become very active, and the prevailing opinion is, that there is an intrigue going forward, the issue of which is likely to be an application to Bonaparte, to place one of his relatives at the head of the Swiss government." German papers to the 28th of March, state that the Austrian armies were completely organized, and that the Archduke John, with 400,000 men, had received orders to hold himself in re-diness to march at a minute's warning. His de-tination, however, remained secret, but it is probably that the main object of his expedition is the Russian troops who were on their march to Prussian Poland.
It is stated in a Vienna paper, that the Elector of Hesse had declined the honors which Napoleon offered to confer upon him.
General Mack, and several inferior officers, have been removed from Olmutz to Spielberg.
[London papers.]
There is no probability of a peace between England and France. "Indeed it is impossible," says the London Sun, of the 8th of April, for any rational man, who considers the situation of Great Britain, of France and of Europe, to enertain very sanguine hopes of the restoration of peace at present. The language of Mr. Fox, on Thursday last, whose wish for peace cannot be doubted, is, we think decisive on that subject." The contest in Europe assumes a more important appearance, and threatens consequences which will be more extensively felt than ever.
Wherever French influence gains the ascendant and Russia, is now almost the only exception, commerce with Britain is apparently to be interdicted. This exercise of that power on the land, will be retaliated by the exercise of that power which Great Britain possesses on the ocean. This tremendous competition will be felt by every commercial nation. We contemplate it with an awe of presentiment, for no policy can preserve our country from its effects. If that intercourse and these relations between nations, which have been forming for many centuries are at once to be dissolved or even suspended, we are soon to witness a scene of unparalleled distress, which will extend through the civilized world.
It is stated that Holland has presumed, once more, to exhibit symptoms of national spirit.
The states general have rejected the arrangement proposed by France, and claim, in the place of it, their treaty of alliance. Internal commotions were expected."
[Boston Repository.]
The following observations and remarks on the situation, climate, &c. of the port of La Guayra and the city of Carracas in Spanish America (furnished by a gentleman lately returned from a voyage to that country) cannot fail to interest every description of readers:
La Guayra is the principal sea port of the province of Carracas and is situated on the foot of an extensive chain of lofty mountains, running immediately along the coast.
It lays in 10, 37, n. lat. and in about 67, w. long. from the meridian of Greenwich.
The high mountain that hangs almost over the town, is called the saddle of Carracas, and is 9230 Spanish feet high. It has been seen at the distance of 25 leagues at sea.

The thermometer is seldom as low as 75, and is generally from 80 to 83 throughout the year, and especially in the summer months, when it is very calm.
The atmosphere is dry, notwithstanding the heat that prevails, its inhabitants are remarkably healthy. Putrid and malignant fevers do not make their appearance here as frequently as in most of the West India islands; and is a circumstance worthy of particular notice, that that class of people who are devoted to the hardest labor and greatest exposure are wonderfully strong and robust. The town and its environs contain about 12,000 inhabitants.
City of Carracas. This is the capital & seat of government of the province of the same name, and is perhaps one of the finest situations in the world. It stands in a most delightful valley immediately over the high mountain, at the foot of which La Guayra is situated, and is distant from that place probably not more than 10 leagues in a direct line south. The road to it over the mountains is 5 leagues, the elevation of this valley above the level of the sea is near 4000 feet. The climate is very even, mild and temperate, the thermometer seldom rising higher than 78 and never falls below 58 and 68. It is generally about 72, Fa-renheit. The atmosphere is rather humid; its inhabitants enjoy exceeding good health.
There are several small rivers near the city where waters are found to be wholesome and very salutary for bathing. Nearly all the European and tropical fruits and vegetables are produced here, and even Indian corn and wheat might be cultivated in sufficient quantities to supply its inhabitants, or even all the West India islands. One may wear a broadcloth cloak all the year round in this delightful valley, without inconvenience and it very properly is denominated the Montpelier of the new world.
The city and its environs contain about 45,000 inhabitants.
The province of Carracas extends from the river Orinoco to the lake of Maraycaibo, which is nearly 800 miles of sea coast.
Exports from La Guayra Puerto Cavello, in 1803, according to custom house: 32,000 fanegas cocoa, 65,000 quintals coffee, 35,000 bales cotton, of 1 quintal each, 85,000 hides, 2,000,000 horns, 20,800 caroons of indigo, 100 lbs. each; 20,000 quintals casahuate tobacco, 500,000 lbs. copper, 200,000 lbs. music, 10,000 lbs. je-

The following Valuable Medicines:

Dr. Rawson's Anti-Bilious and Stomach Bitters.

PREPARED BY
THOMAS H. RAWSON,
Member of the Connecticut Medical Society.

THESE Bitters have undoubtedly had the most rapid sale of any Patent Medicine ever before discovered, and are justly appreciated for their singular and uncommon virtues for restoring weak and decayed constitutions, and all that train of complicated complaints so common in the spring and fall seasons, such as intermittent fevers and agues, long autumnal fevers, dysenteries, &c. They are also a very pleasant bitter for common use, and where they are known they have taken the place and superseded the use of all other bitters in public houses as well as in private families.—Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Lee's (Wintham) Bilious Pills.
THE great sale and increasing demand for these valuable pills for these twelve years past, bespeak their intrinsic worth. They have proved singularly efficacious in Bilious and Yellow fevers, jaundice, Head Aches, Dysenteries, Bilious Colic, Catarrhs, Female complaints, &c.

The very great demand and high esteem in which these pills are held throughout the United States and the West Indies, has induced many to counterfeit them; the purchaser is requested to observe that the name of Samuel Lee, jun. (the patentee) is affixed to each bill of directions, in his own hand writing, or they will not be genuine. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Itch Ointment.

A certain and safe application for that disagreeable complaint called the ITCH. Price 42 cents a box.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Will be received by the Editor of this paper FOR THE

Companion & Weekly Miscellany;

EDWARD EASY, Esq.
Published at Baltimore every Saturday, at THREE DOLLARS per annum, payable half yearly in advance.

THE editor will be happy to receive communications which lead to the exercise of the minds of those who have had a cultivated education, and might tend to the mutual improvement of the writers and the readers. In this country, so rapidly advancing in every object of improvement, there must be much cause for animating the minds of our youth, and presenting for directing the course to be pursued. To these objects he is very desirous of attracting attention. Biography of the noblest heroes of the revolutionary war, might be also very interesting. Events of this nature, not on public record, would be highly acceptable. Phenomena in natural history, will also be attended to with peculiar pleasure.

The three first numbers have been received and may be seen at this office.

Runaway Negro JACK.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber, living in Potomack Neck, Charles County, Maryland, about two miles below Mount Vernon, a Negro Man, named JACK, about 50 years of age, his voice is loud, but speaks with ease of himself—he is very black, both of his limbs are of a purple color, and extend 5 or 6 inches in length and about one inch broad. When sitting too near the fire, there is a burn on the back of one of his hands, but don't prevent the full use of it. JACK came from Guinea when about 12 or 13 years old. I don't know any thing that would make a stranger suspect JACK's elopement, sooner than that of calling himself a Baptist and being fond of argument. Whoever brings home the said negro or figures him in jail, so that I get him again, shall be entitled to 20 Dollars if 20 miles from home, if 30 miles 30 Dollars, and if 50 miles 40 Dollars, and reasonable expenses paid by

Modern Philosophy;

OR

Terrible Traitorship!

A PORTAL PETITION AGAINST ALVAMING TRUMPERY, and the PERKINISTIC INSTITUTION:

Addressed to the Royal College of Physicians, London.

By CHRISTOPHER CANNICK, M. D. & F. R. S. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Aberdeen, and Honorary Member of no less than nineteen very learned Societies.

The object of this Poem is to promote the best interests of Society, by arraying the powers of legitimate satire against the philosophists, quack politicians, and other scoundrels of the day, and to give more extensive publicity to such intentions, improvements, and other exertions of the human mind as deserve to be patronized by the community.

The author proposes to enlarge the work, by the addition of such matter as he presumes will be found most immediately interesting to the American public, and hopes his efforts to improve the plan and execution of the Poem, will be thought in some measure worthy of the favorable reception with which it has already been honored in Europe and in America.

The above work will be published by the subscriber in about two months—Price, bound in boards, two dollars.

Twenty Dollars Reward.

WILL be given for apprehending and securing in jail, a young mulatto man slave, named ANDREW. He was hired by me last year to Mr. Joseph Thomas, who keeps the middle ferry opposite to Alexandria, and absconded from that place about the latter end of August last. He is about 23 years of age, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, lanky and well made, has short curled hair, and is frequently subject to have several large pimples in his face. He is reckoned to be a sensible fellow, of an early agreeable address for a man in his low sphere of life. As he has not been heard of by me since his elopement, I suspect he has had the address to ship himself as a freeman on board some vessel either at Alexandria or Baltimore. Whoever takes him up and secures him in any jail, shall receive from me the above reward, as soon as due information thereof is given to me or to Doctor N. P. Causin, at Port Tobacco.
